Green Building Services

Green Building Services

The Southface Green Building Services team, composed of building scientists, engineers, architects, urban planners and policy experts, has provided objective and practical advice to building design and construction professionals, developers, corporations, building owners and homeowners for more than 30 years.

SOUTHFACE EXPERTISE

Our experts can assist you in addressing your building's energy and water performance, indoor environmental quality and the best use of natural resources, as well as the policies and approaches that will optimize your building's ongoing performance and operational costs. In addition, we can work with you to certify your building in accordance with key regional and national green building programs such as EarthCraft, ENERGY STAR®, LEED®, NAHB's Green Building Program and Green Communities.

Southface's Green Building Services also offers workshop facilitation and consulting services to address a host of topics in areas such as operations, general sustainability, program development, policy and research.

In addition, we provide a variety of trainings, both in the classroom and online, and have an extensive library of information resources to help you deepen your understanding of current and emerging green building technologies and practices.

SERVICES

Southface offers a breadth of building-science-based services to help you save money, conserve resources, and enhance the comfort and performance of your buildings – from affordable homes to skyscrapers!

BUILDING AUDITS & ASSESSMENTS

Southface has conducted thousands of assessments on single-family, multifamily and commercial buildings. In addition to helping you identify the sources of and solutions to building occupants' complaints, our building science experts can benchmark your building's current environmental performance against similar buildings, suggest ways to improve your energy and water efficiency, and assist you in qualifying for green building program certifications.

BUILDING CERTIFICATIONS

Green building certifications authenticate, with independent third-party verifiers, that a home or building has met established performance thresholds. This provides owners and occupants with the assurance that a building is healthy, durable, and energy, water and resource efficient.

LEED ADMINISTRATION

Southface has helped dozens of projects earn LEED certification. Whether you are an owner, builder or architect, we can assist you in completing the requirements and administration needed to achieve LEED certification for your project.

CONSULTING

If you need assistance with building design, operations, general sustainability, policy, research or program development, Southface can provide you with a thoughtful, cost-effective and real-world solution based on our more than 30 years of in-field expertise.

ON-SITE INSPECTIONS & TESTING

On-site diagnostic inspections and testing can reveal hidden sources of expensive energy waste in both commercial and residential buildings. Southface helps building owners and others to identify and address these problems with blower-door and duct-blaster testing, among other techniques.

CHARRETTES

A charrette is a collaborative session that takes place during the design and planning stages of a building project. Southface-facilitated charrettes offer invaluable assistance to help you fine tune your planning and communications, project goals, opportunities, challenges and expected outcomes.
